Melanocytic schwannomas are rare and benign neoplasms of the peripheral nerves, which are seen more frequently in Japanese than in Caucasian populations. We report 16 cases of melanocytic schwannomas seen in 11 boys and 5 girls (mean age, 10.5 years) over a 10-year period, and describe the histologic and immunohistochemical features of these lesions. The tumors were mostly intradural and occurred at various spinal sites. None was intracranial. The cellular pattern was spindle-shaped, and the immunohistochemical results were consistent with differentiation toward schwann cell lineage (neuronal and myelin antigens, S100 protein, and low to negative reactivity with epithelial membrane antigen and cytokeratin 7).Over 90% of end-stage renal disease patients in the United States of America who have a lifetime opportunity for kidney transplantation do not receive one due to a chronic shortage of donor kidneys.
