Rare earth elements in various objects were investigated by analytical techniques including X-ray fluorescence spectrometry (XFS) and inductively coupled plasma mass spectrometry (ICP-MS) in order to determine the feasibility of nondestructive analysis of various objects such as powder, bulk, and paint. Trace rare earth elements (REEs) contained in various objects including rare earth elements-rich ores were found to show variable distributions in these objects by analyses of XFS and ICP-MS. With XFS, REE elements were detected in samples by using a benchtop XFS instrument with energy dispersive X-ray (EDX) spectrometry with a detection limit of $10 \mu\text{g kg}^{-1}$ for REEs. On the other hand, REEs were detected in samples by ICP-MS with a detection limit of $0.01 \mu\text{g kg}^{-1}$ for REEs.
